

Topical Vs. Book of the Bible Study

There are many ways to study the bible. Some people might open up and begin to read while others might be a bit more intentional.

Topical bible studies involve researching and study a specific topic of interest. You can utilize a concordance (found in the back of many bibles) to find different places in the bible where the topic might appear. There are a vast amount of resources (many on this website) that serve as great starting points to studying a specific topic. Study bibles usually have study notes that link topics in different parts of the bible. Utilizing the study notes allows for a more complete understanding of a topic.

Chapter or book of the bible studies are associated with verses. A verse can be broken down and understood in its correct context. Study notes are also utilized during this type of study. There can be numerous topics discussed within a chapter or verse. The focal point is the verse and the context of the message being shared.
